Elon’s Mars Survival Guide

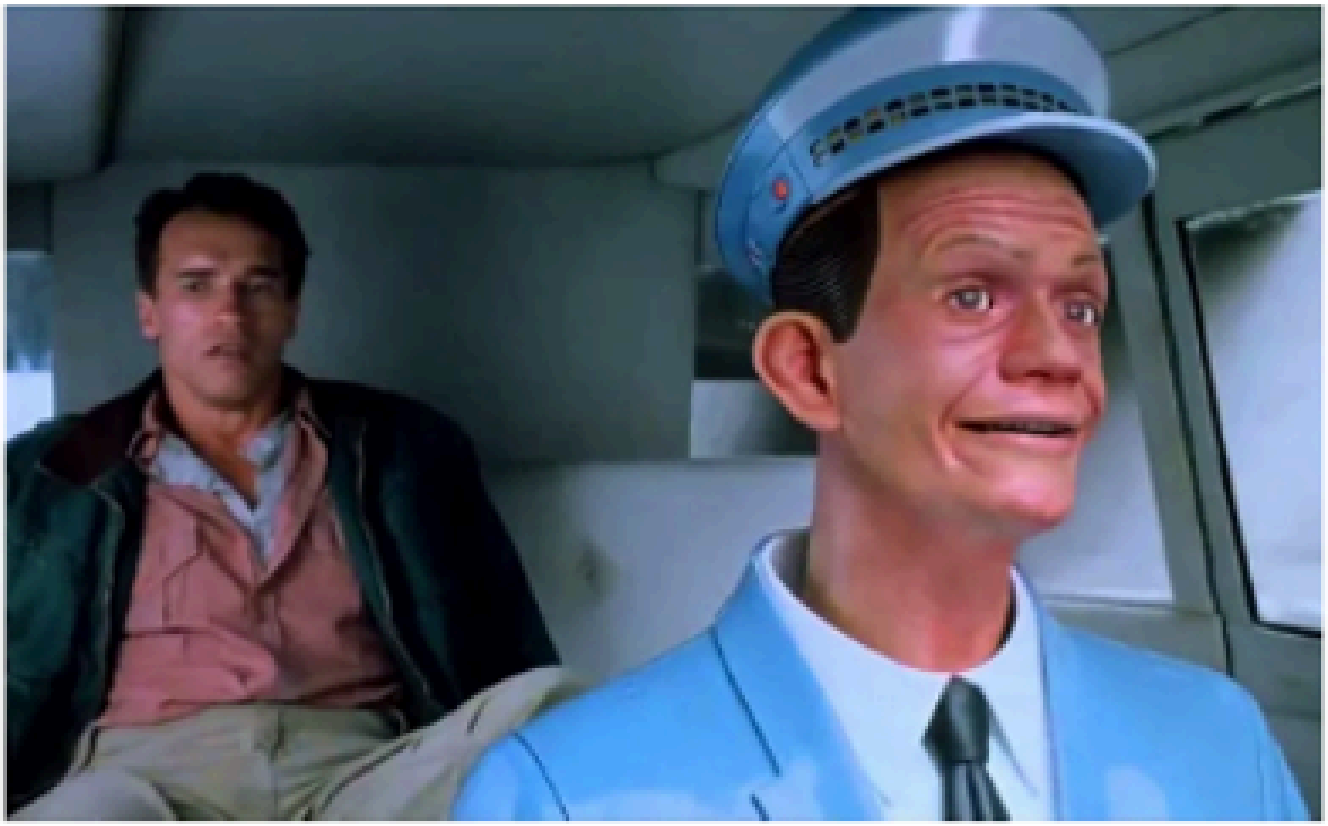
Make your upcoming Mars Trip a success, using these simple tips!

Before going to Mars, ask someone who has been there, to rate the best bars and hotels.

To ensure plenty of time to explore, plan to stay on Mars for at least Two Weeks.

Avoid missing your flight, by taking a Johhny Cab to the spaceport!

(Unless there is some "other brand" of electric vehicle that you prefer)



To the Spaceport, and step on it! - I have a flight to catch!

It is a long trip to Mars, so don't waste your food supplies by using them to paint murals!

(And watch out for Space Rats, or they can make a real mess in your spaceship!)

Backseat drivers are even more annoying on interplanetary trips, so have a plan to deal with them!

Take a few extra pressure suits on your trip, in case one gets damaged!

Don't shoot dome windows, or you could cause a decompression!

Be careful who you trust! (trust noble brunettes, but be cautious around evil blondes!)

Find out which Mars mutants are good (left), and which ones are evil (right)!

To avoid injuries, be careful when working around moving machinery!

While exploring, be careful who you share your air with (especially if they had beans for lunch)!

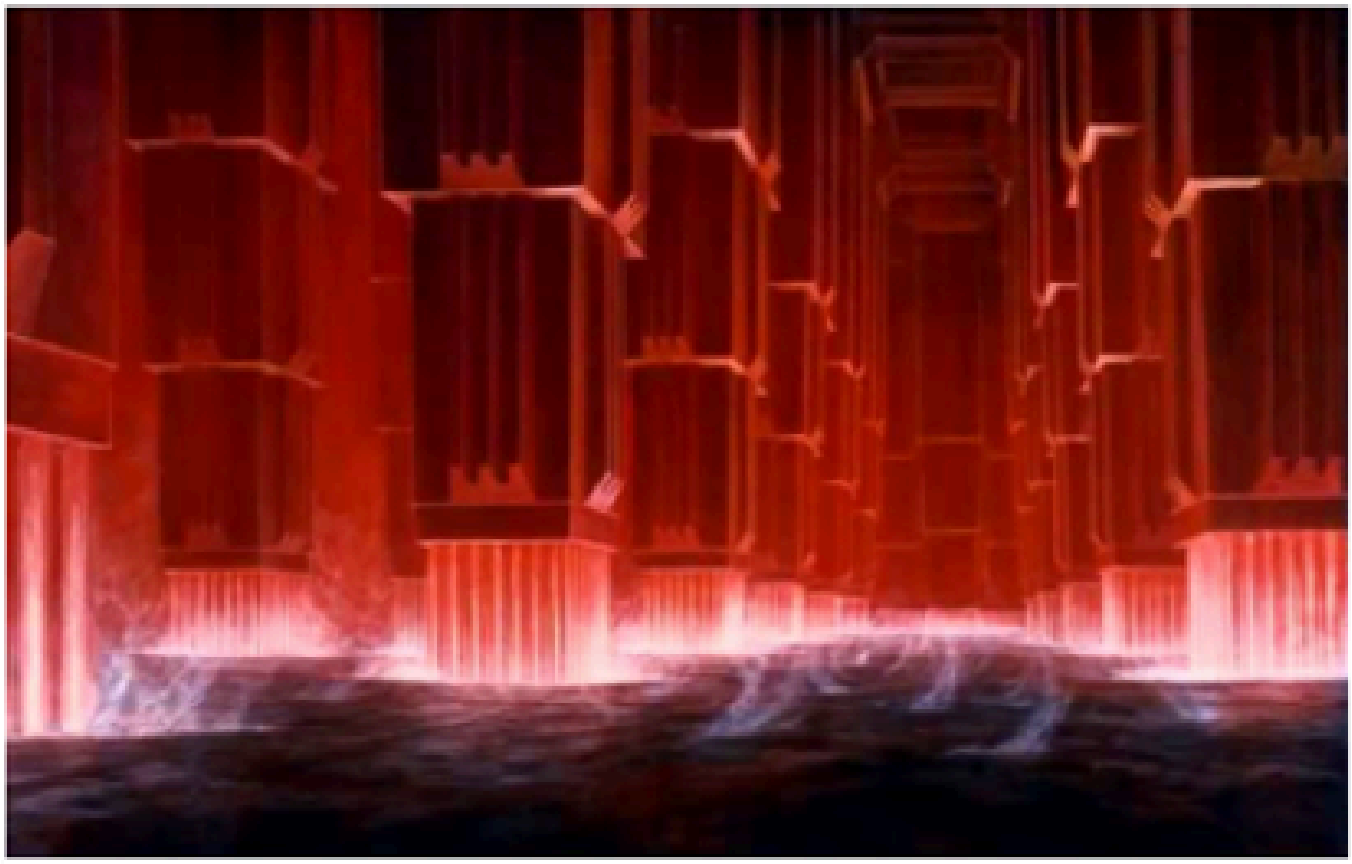
Get to know the local wildlife! (the Woola dog is friendly, and the Thoat is a useful pack animal!)

Avoid dangerous Martian animals (the White Ape is not friendly, and the Banth is not friendly!)

Take useful tools and weapons on your trip - you'll need them when you get there!

Firearms and heavy chopping blades have many survival uses, when exploring distant planets!

If aliens already built a large atmospheric processing plant on Mars, you may as well start it up!

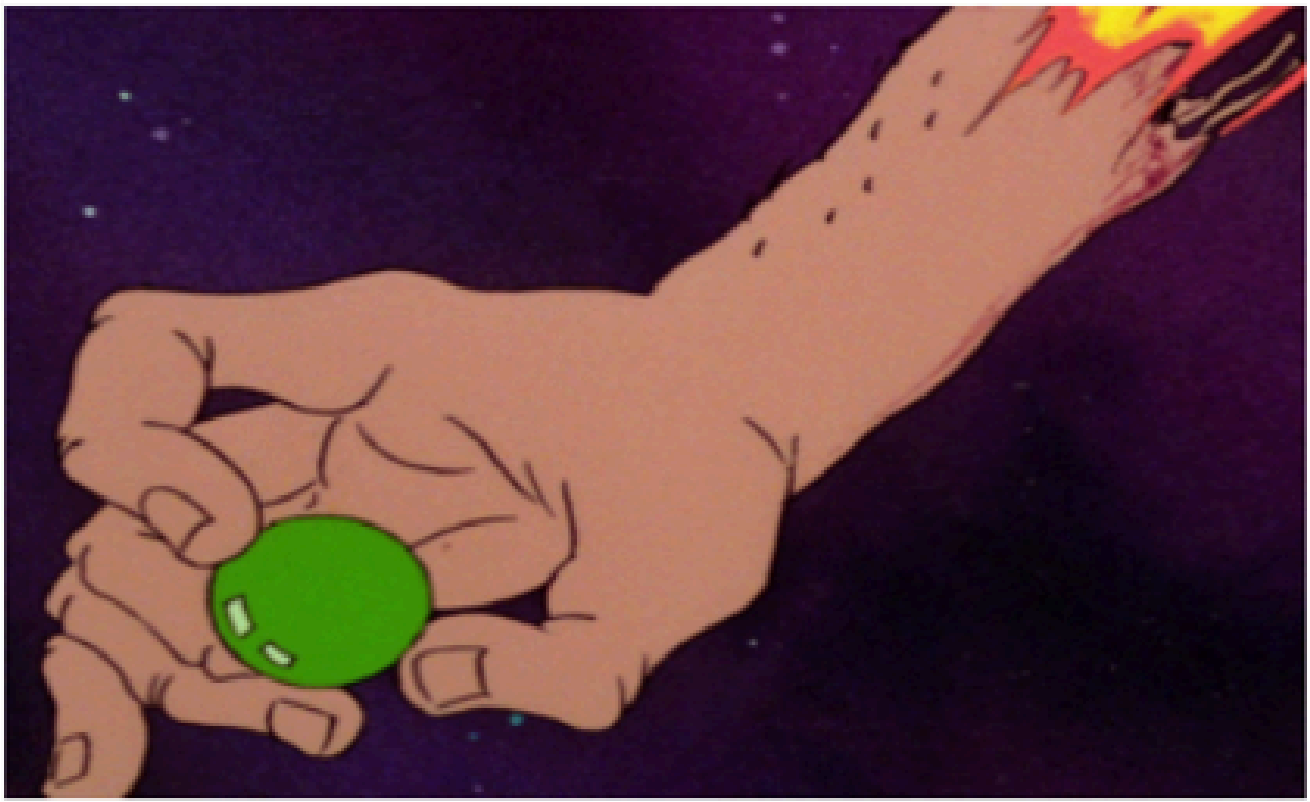


If your food supplies start to run low while on Mars, try growing some potatoes!

When searching martian caves for water, you may find pods that look like japanese cabbage.

(But don't try to harvest them!)

Suspicious alien pods should be destroyed, using a flamethrower! (If you know where to buy one)



Final Tip - If you find a "Loc-Nar" while excavating, throw it away! (Those things are dangerous!)
